USAKA uses new concept to win $75K

By Jim Bennett

The command took the top spot in the SMDC Commander's Quality Award for the second time in three years and earned USAKA an extra $75,000 to spend on the community.

"We put the report together, but everyone contributed," said Lt. Col. Steve Morris, chief, USAKA Plans, Training and Security, who coordinated the effort. "All we did was document what you [the community] do."

USAKA took a different approach to the SMDC Quality Award this year, expanding the self-assessment team to include experts from functional areas including the

French ship Prairial to make port call at Kwajalein for goodwill visit

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

The French guided missile frigate Prairial is scheduled to make a port call next week at Kwajalein.

The 307-foot-long ship arrives around 9 a.m. Thursday and departs 9 a.m. Saturday for Majuro, where it will make a similar goodwill port call, according to Stephan Notarianni, of the USAKA

Host Nation office.

A Kwaj World Cup soccer match will highlight the visit, with an all-star team of locals representing the island

Nineteen Makin Raiders were repatriated in 1999, but the Marines executed on Kwajalein in 1944 remain MIA. The search is still on back in Hawaii.

CILHI historians looking for additional clues to help locate Makin Raiders

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

Two months after a team from the U.S. Army Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu left Kwajalein frustrated in its attempt to locate the remains of missing U.S. service members from World War II, the search continues.

"We're going back to the investigative portion of the search," said Ginger Couden, CILHI spokesperson. That involves another round of finding witnesses and documents that could shed additional light on a 60-year-old mystery. At the heart of the matter are nine Marines believed to have been executed and buried on Kwajalein, near the memorial Japanese cemetery. For more than two months, between January and March, CILHI tested that belief with a massive excavation of the surrounding area but came away mostly empty-handed.

The puzzle is now back in the hands of the department's four-member World War II historical section, Couden said. A return date for another recovery team is contingent upon what they are able or unable to find, she added.

How about some ref appreciation?

I can't hold it in any longer. The amount of constant whining, complaining and yelling at basketball officials is really unbelievable.

Refs have a difficult job and are out there doing the best they can to call a fair game. But my comments aren't about the quality of the officials as much as poor sportsmanship by the players.

Here's a little secret I'd like to pass on: Constant whining and complaining does not gain you any respect, sympathy or win future calls. Rather, you will only irritate the refs and your negative energy will fuel your frustration, causing you to throw a temper tantrum next time down the court when you try to draw a foul deliberately and poorly (I've seen this several times).

Furthermore, many calls can go either way; it's called ref discretion. Just because you don't agree, is it really necessary to yap your mouth?

And another known fact: Bad calls happen. In fact they are part of sports — at all levels. Refs are human beings and will miss calls. Accept it and get over it. Chances are the calls even out. Yelling at them and shouting, "These refs s—!" only makes you look like a poor loser — for real.

Be glad your teammates and fans don't yell out at each of your mistakes and remind you of how novice your game is. Honestly, does the ref win or lose the game for you? Or could it have something to do with all the brick shots, horrible passes and other endless turnovers made by your team?

My coaches in high school and college taught me to respect the officials and never use them as a scapegoat? Officiating is tough. I challenge you to put the stripes on and call a perfect game.

Boat captain acts quickly to avoid collision

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

A loose wire temporarily disabled an LCM Monday morning, locking the throttle into forward speed as the boat entered the harbor on its return from Ebeye.

But Capt. Mike Torgerson was able to steer the vessel back out of the harbor without any problems, keeping it going in circles until it could be shut down.

"He did an excellent job," said Tom Dillon, Marine Services manager, of Torgerson. "As soon as he realized there was a throttle problem, he steered the boat away from all obstructions."

Torgerson said that when the boat first wouldn't respond, he thought he could fix the problem in a few seconds. But it was quickly apparent that the malfunction was more serious, and he turned the boat around to get it out of the close confines of the harbor.

"When I first started to turn, I wasn't sure if I was going to miss the first row of [moored sail] boats," he said.

"It's such a freaky thing," he added. "I don't think it's ever happened before."

After Torgerson and his crew shut the engine down, a second LCM was dispatched to tow the boat back to Echo Pier.

Capt. Mike Torgerson's quick actions avoided a collision after the LCM he piloted Monday locked into forward throttle as he entered the harbor.

A loose wire caused the problem, according to Dillon. It took about 10 to 15 minutes to fix after the boat was returned to Echo Pier.

"Basically, it was an electronic failure," he said. "This is the first time we've had [a problem] with this type of throttle."

The electric throttles replaced cable-driven throttles about three years ago, he added. A loose wire is not an uncommon occurrence with electronic throttles, but it hasn't been a problem with these, Dillon said, explaining that the old system caused much more headaches for boat crews.

Clinton first U.S. president at Kwaj

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Bill Clinton may have scored a first when he visited Kwajalein last weekend. After some quick research and a visit with Kwajalein historian Gene Sims, it appears that Clinton is the first president, either sitting or former, to visit the island.

Since U.S. forces liberated the island from Imperial Japan during World War II, the United States has had 12 presidents. FDR died only a year after the island was taken. Sims said he has no record or knowledge of Truman visiting Kwajalein, though Truman did fly to Wake Island to meet with MacArthur during the Korean War. Eisenhower traveled to Korea, but again, no record or story exists of his stopping here en route either way across the Pacific, Sims said.

That leaves Kennedy, LBJ, Nixon, Ford, Carter, Reagan, Bush Sr. and current President George W. Bush. None of them stopped here, according to Sims, who lived on Kwajalein from 1945-46, 1964-71 and 1983-86, and who is the author of Kwajalein Remembered, the unofficial history of the island after World War II.

CMI-Gugeegue graduates eleven students Monday

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

Eleven students crossed a major threshold in their lives Monday, as they received diplomas from the College of the Marshall Islands-Gugeegue during a ceremony Monday afternoon at the United Church of Christ.

Iroijalaplap Michael Kabua served as keynote speaker of the event, offering speeches in Marshallese and English. In keeping with the theme of the evening, Kabua encouraged the students to "believe in the beauty of their dreams."

Graduates include Atinta Arikatau, Libeio Balos, Stanton Calep, Scott Calep, Terrilynn deBrum, Rebecca Dribo, Sanry Hazzard, Bojen Jorju, Taien Joseph, Sef Korok and Zepty Lucky.

The campus will take a hiatus until August 2003 while accreditation issues are resolved.

Memorial Day ceremony to focus on POW/MIAs ...

"Regardless, the search will continue until we find the Makin Raiders," Couden said.

The nine Marines were members of the 2nd Raider Battalion under the command of Col. Evans Carlson. Trained in amphibious assault, the 222 Marines attacked Makin Atoll in the former Gilbert Islands in August 1942. About a score of men were killed in the action, and buried on Butaritari Island. Their remains were repatriated by CILHI in 1999. Another dozen Marines were missing in action. Nine of those men likely ended up on Kwajalein. Several B-24 air crews may also have been executed here.

Tripp Wiles, CILHI historian/analyst, did much of the original research for the recovery mission that took place earlier this year. He said his department is looking into the possibility of talking with additional Japanese veterans, but there's no reason to doubt that the information CILHI has already received from witnesses — including Japanese officers in charge — is reliable.

"I think we were in the right area," Wiles said.

It is possible that the graves were disturbed during the 1944 invasion of the island by American forces or by Navy Seabees in the 1950s, according to Wiles.

Despite the impasse, interest in the recovery is still high among media and veterans, Couden said. "A lot of the Marine Raiders inquire about how it's going."

CILHI's recovery missions around the world continue to find U.S. service members in the most remote corners of the globe. Couden said two teams are currently in Papua New Guinea at separate sites recovering B-24 air crews. One team is deployed in a mountainous jungle area, while the other team is also working in a remote mountain setting.

"They're logistically challenging sites," Couden said.

Despite the challenges of Papua New Guinea, CILHI has recovered 113 service members in the last 20-plus years. Analysts believe there may be as many as 250 American World War II crash sites throughout the country. Worldwide, more than 78,000 Americans are still missing from World War II alone.

Memorial Day

Residents will have an opportunity to reflect on service members who paid the ultimate price at Monday's Memorial Day ceremonies at the flagpole site at 9 a.m. In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will be at Island Memorial Chapel.

Monday's ceremony will include a special tribute to POW/MIA personnel as well as the community unveiling of two memorials placed in front of the Kwaj Lodge in March, according to LuAnne Fantasia, USAKA Public Affairs officer.

One memorial is dedicated to Operation: Flintlock, the name given to the February 1944 invasion of Kwajalein Atoll by the U.S. The other plaque is a memorial to the Makin Raiders.

Fantasia said the official dedication of both monuments will happen when they are moved to a site near the remains of the Makin Raiders, as soon as CILHI makes that determination.

against the ship's crew. The game is scheduled for 6 p.m. Thursday at Brandon Field, according to Scott Pratt, Community Activities Adult Recreation supervisor.

The Prairial's home port is Papeete, Tahiti. She sports a crew of about 90, including special forces troops.

French Ambassador Jean Pierre Vidon will arrive here from Suva, Fiji, in conjunction with the ship's visit, Notarianni said. Vidon is ambassador to seven Pacific nations, including the Republic of the Marshall Islands.

Notarianni said he will take the ambassador to Third Island during his trip in hopes of securing humanitarian aid in the form of solar panels. The French have a similar program underway at two outer islands already, he added.

Input sought on how to spend APIC money ...

range, Huntsville and Public Affairs, to name a few.

"They knew the details about how we do things," Morris said. "Almost all of the questions in the application start with 'How do you...?'"

Members of the team will receive awards at Saturday's USAKA awards ceremony. Civilian members will receive $250 cash awards.

USAKA last won the $75,000 Commander's Quality Award in 2000 and took second place last year, garnering a $50,000 award.

In each case, the command has solicited the community on how to spend the money, focusing on spreading out the award money to benefit the greatest number of residents, Morris said. Improvements included a dive pavilion near the ski area steps on Kwajalein and a fuel station on Roi-Namur in 2001, and in 2000 a pavilion outside the BQs, renovations to the airport terminal, a water slide at the family pool and installation of water and power to a pavilion on Roi.

USAKA again wants community input for this year's award. Suggestions may be e-mailed to Morris at Steve.Morris@usaka.smdc.army.mil.

The Quality Award reviews each of SMDC's 10 elements and how they use the Army Performance Improvement Criteria, the Army's version of the Malcolm Baldrige Award criteria. Each command submits a self-assessment that is judged by a panel of quality experts from throughout SMDC.

Instituted in 1999, APIC has woven itself throughout the fabric of operations at USAKA and the range and improved processes, Morris said.

"Customers, we never used to use words like this before," Morris said. "We're performing a lot better almost across the board, whether it's customer satisfaction, staying under budget or meeting deadlines."

The "new culture," as Morris calls it, has inspired many departments to rethink their own processes, saving the command millions. The command already has realized more than $4 million in savings from a $4 million investment in 2000 to replace the Dash-7 aircraft with Beech 1900Ds. Kwajalein Modernization and Remoting programs, started before APIC, but augmented since the process began, likely will save the command $16.5 million annually over the next 10 years, Morris said.

Basketball championship games finish this week

Led by Dean Olenik and Dave Gray, The Girls took a 10-point lead into half-

In the second game of the evening, Triple J defeated Ballaz, 51-39, to claim the men's C division crown.

By Kim Parker

Contributing Writer

Competition is tight at this year's Coral Open, with the top golfers in two of the six flights all tied for first place in their individual flights following the first round of tournament play last weekend.

Raymond Demaio, Tsugio Miyashiro and Michael Waters are knotted with a net 62 in the third flight. Meanwhile, Rudy Gil Jr., Amanda Reed and Gerry Wolf are battling for the top spot in the fourth flight with a net 63.

A total of 108 golfers are competing in the 33rd annual tournament at Holmberg Fairways.

The Coral Open is one of two major tournaments sponsored by the Kwajalein Golf Association each year. The other tournament, the Kwaj Open, is held in November.

"[The Coral Open] is on a smaller scale than the Kwaj Open," said Lee Allas, tournament co-chairperson. The entry fees, as well as the prizes, are a bit smaller, she said.

But that doesn't seem to diminish the enthusiasm.

"I'm excited [about the tournament]," said Gloria Cassiday, Coral Open participant. "I don't usually play the Kwaj Open because I'm not that good of a golfer, but the ladies I golf with decided we'd give [the Coral Open] a try."

Cassiday is currently in third place in her flight after the first round.

"Golf is a game of chance and skill," Allas said. "A lot of people shy away [from tournaments] because they don't think they are good enough."

But that just isn't the case, she said, as the Coral Open has room for everyone.

The two-round tournament continues this weekend.
